

Engaged Classrooms for Thinking and Learning

December is a great time to look back over the semester and prepare for the months ahead. This day is designed so that participants have the opportunity to gain new insight in regards to managing the learning environment in a way that maximizes thinking and learning.

The agenda for this workshop is reflective of feedback from classroom teachers when asked to identify some of the greatest challenges in managing the learning environment. Participants will spend the day experiencing classroom processes that support thinking and learning. Turn challenge into strength with fresh ideas for putting curriculum and instruction together for high impact.
